Agile Coaching

Transformative Agile coaching from active and experienced Agile practitioners. For speed, visibility and the ability to manage changing priorities.

"Excellent training. The theories and principles were given practical context and we left with great advice that we could take away and start using immediately. I learned a lot."

Cardiff University

Is it for me?

If you're looking to unlock the power of Agile for your organisation Box UK's coaching is the key, teaching you not how to do Agile, but how to be Agile.

Whether you're just getting started or are further along in your adoption of the approach, our coaching delivers high value - providing quality classroom training through a flexible framework that is perfectly customised for you and your needs.

While Agile has been popularised in software development, the principles are relevant and effective across many other industries and departments. We invite you to bring your unique requirements, and even live projects, to the table and walk away equipped with the skills, techniques and approaches you need for longstanding success.

What's involved?

To shape the scope of your Agile coaching programme, we'll first discuss with you any specific use contexts, areas of interest and pain points; using this information to supplement our established agenda with tailored advice and activities.

Then, once the content of your course has been defined, we'll run your coaching over 1 - 2 days, with your coach leading a group of up to eight participants at a time. Sessions are typically a mix of training on Agile's most important principles and techniques, and consultation that enables us to contextualise these within your particular environment and give you actionable, personalised advice. You'll experience both traditional and conversational training methods, and engage in many practical exercises that provide hands-on experience and generate valuable "light-bulb" moments. Questions and discussion are encouraged throughout, after all this is all about you and your needs.

Our emphasis throughout on building a shared understanding means that we provide a consultative view of Agile training; establishing your pain points and recommending techniques and approaches within the unique context of your organisation.

Training subjects can include:

- Overview of Agile
- Agile teams and roles
- What happens in a sprint?
- Estimation
- Develoment in Scrum

- User stories, prioritisation and acceptance criteria
- User story maps and backlogs
- How do you scope an Agile project?

- Agile reporting
- Remote working and Agile
- Agile business analysis
- Requirements gathering

Credentials

Our Agile coaching team has delivered training and consultancy to many clients across a diverse set of industries; from a sporting governing body through logistics and automotive firms to universities and social enterprises. Crucially, as practitioners of Agile themselves they understand the real-world issues relating to its application, and know how to practically resolve them while safeguarding agility, quality and commercial results. Ultimately, you receive pragmatic, actionable advice that is based on up-to-date methods, has been tried and tested in live projects, and is tailored to your business and circumstances.

Results

You'll come out of our Agile coaching sessions armed with an understanding of:

- ✔ The important principles and practices of an Agile framework
- ✔ What sets Agile apart from traditional methods
- ✔ Roles and responsibilities in an Agile team
- ✔ The importance of prioritisation, and methods to achieve this
- ✔ Methods for Agile planning and scoping

- ✔ Methods for Agile estimation
- ✔ The delivery structure
- ✔ The critical importance of iteration, collaboration and feedback - and how these principles help deliver better projects and products
- ✔ How to go forward and address your problems in your specific environment
